Q.5 What contribution in womens education was made by Mumtaz Ali?

(c) Write a precis of the following passage and give a suitable title:(5)
Man has not sprung up just from Adi Manava to the present civilized man and this society from primitive communism to the complex state of today. In the beginning, isolated human species was overawed with natural forces like lightening and thunderstorms and tempests, even river and mountains night and darkness and was frightened to be alone. He was unprotected and in constant danger of survival. This necessitated the formation of groups wherein he was to find shelter and protection against hostile nature and dangerous animals. There could not be any concept of family in this primitive society. There was no material advancement and, as such, there was no concept of property. Hunting was the source of existence, consuming most of the time. There were no problems. This was our primitive communism. To preserve the unity amongst the members, blood relation was the best instinct : woman was, therefore, made the leader of this group. This is the reason we find still in many private communities, the domination of mother.

Many of the reformers felt that education for girls was necessary in order to improve the condition of women. Vidyasagar in Calcutta and many other reformers in Bombay set up schools for girls. When the first schools were opened in the mid-nineteenth century, many people were afraid of them. They feared that schools would take girls away from home, prevent them from doing their domestic duties. Moreover, girls had to travel through public places in order to reach school. Many people felt that this would have a corrupting influence on them. They felt that girls should stay away from public spaces. Therefore, Throughout the nineteen century most educated women were taught at home by liberal fathers or husbands, sometimes women taught themselves. In the latter part of the century, school for girls were established by the Arya Samaj in punjab, and Jyotirao phule in maharashtra.

In aristocratic muslim households in North India, women learnt to read the Koran in Arabic. They were taught by women who came home to teach. some reformers such as Mumtaz Ali reinterpreted verses from the Koran to argue for women's education.

- Q.1 What was the opinion of the Reformers in the context of girl education?
- Q.2 Why were the people afraid of girls education?
- Q.3 How did most of the educated women receive their education?
- Q.4 Who established schools for girls in Bengal and Maharashtra?
